ATLIANTA, Ga., April 30.—Federal authorities were busy today seeking clews to the sender of an infernal machine which exploded in the apartment of former Senator Thomas W. Hardwick here late yesterday, zeriously injuring Mrs. Hardwick and a negro mail. The package containing the explosive had been mailed from New Tork city to Mr. Hardwick.

Wrappers bearing the name of Gimbel Bros. a large department store of New York city, marked "sample," inclosed the deadly machine, and postal authorities link the occurrence with a similar attempt Monday on the life of Mayor Ole Hanson, of Seattle. The package sent Mayor Hanson was prepared in the same manner, but did not explode.

am sure, believe Germany will not sign unless the whole treaty terms are rad-ically modified, and the last semblance of victory taken from those who bore the burden of the struggle.

Italian Course.

As to the Italian course, it is clear that Italy is in the throes of a nationalistic explosion which would make it unsafe for any Italian stateman to surrender. The president's position in the matter of Filme has the approval of the fair and right-minded Europeans as a question of abstract justice. Italy, on the concrary has enomous sympathy growing out of ever-mounting resentment at Atacrican interference in purely European questions, and the dictatorial tone that accompanies our interference.

I am told the president would choose to return to America rather than surrender in the Adriatic matter. But I am equally clearly advised, even by Americans in touch with the administration, that it is becoming clearer and clearer that there is small prospect that Italy will recede from her position. If she refuses to recede, she can hardly be expected to sign the treaty with Germany, which carries the realization of at least a portion of French and British demands, and leaves her Adriatic demands, and leaves her Adriatic demands pending. If Italy refuses to sign, she has power to invoke a treaty made with her European allies, not a secret but a public treaty, by which Britain, France and Italy agreed not to take a separate peace with Germany. I am told the president would choose not to take a separate peace with Germany.

This raises the final question: If Italy refuses, will France and Britain still sign? Here there is more light. Unless all indications fall, France will not break what she regards as a solemn treasty obligation. I do not think there is the slightest chance that France will desert Italy, although most Frenchmen sympathise; but if France and Italy refuse to sign, there is no treaty of peace. Moreover, if Germany arrives on Thurnday, Italy will not be represented and Germany will only receive terms informally, with a grant of time to examine these terms, while her conquerors try to adopt them.

In a word, an anomalous and unprecedented situation has arisen and not the smallest step toward solution has yet been taken.

Japan Dissatisfied.

Still another complication threatens: Japan has been and remains bitterly disappointed at the failure of her appear Japan has been and remains bitterly disappointed at the failure of her appeal to the league of nations to remove the stigma of race and color placed upon her emigrants by the United States and certain British colonies. She has, in addition, a grievance growing out of her secret treaty with Britain and France as to German possessions. In the East, and a remedy in her subscription to the pact of London.

So much for the difficulties which are unmistakable, but beneath the surface the Italian incident has provoked very great European emotion. Europe as reaching the conclusion that the price she is paying for American intervention in European affairs is too high and promises uttimate, perhaps speedy, ruin.

No one can be in Paris and not feel this tremendous revolution of feeling. The numbers of people who actually believed in the league of nations was always small. By contrast, millions of prople entertained a hope which this proposal seemed to express. Hence the vast enthusiasm at the outset.

But the whole North and longing on the job and longing on the job and other occupations in the exist of foreign compounds and promises uttimate, perhaps apedy, ruin.

tied or abolished by American intervention.

The result is simple, but it is unmistakable. Every continental nation still finds itself for financial reasons obliged to continue to show respect, even deference, to American demands, but belief in American proposals for the league of nations has diminished day by day for many weeks.

Little by little, despite its financial burdens, Europe is beginning to reassert itself. The reaction against American domination and American ideas is the single striking circumstance at the present moment. If Europe still does lip service to the league of nations it is because it still has regard for American financial resources and feed supplies. But aside from this Europe, I mean the continent, whose condition and history differ radically from those of England, is rapidly, very rapidly, approaching a situation in which it will prefer financial bankruptcy to what it conceives will mean political bankruptcy, following further submission to American ideas, whether expressed in the league of nations coverant or the lapuration and every observant American, every sensitive American, is painfully aware of this fact today. Lawrence Points Out Big Questions Unanswered in Portland and Other Cities Where Conditions Are Bad.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

The News Scimitar's Special Corre-PORTLAND, Ore., April 30.—Pacific oast problems of reconstruction are vital interest to the whole country not the world. In the big shippards uilt here thousands upon thousands of killed workmen have been employed ong the coast-some 26,000 in Portand alone. What shall become of the mense yards and ways? What shall come of the men? What shall beme of the ships already built or ilding? Answer these questions and to whole Pacific coatst will breathe migh of relief

Also one might then discover the aner to the question of unemployment. for already there are many men out of york because the shipyards do not now what the future will bring, and already many more are worrying about that is to become of them when all the what is to become of them when all the work on present contracts ends in October, next. Again, lumber is abundant in this northwest region. Yet every city of importance in the Central West and many in the Eastern states have high rents and a lack of homes. Big business in many cities is encouraging workmen to own their own homes. The demand for lumber is bound to become nation-wide, yet prices have not dropped. One banker hare insisted that the cost of labor keeps the price of materials high and that only by a guarantee of greater efficiency all along the line can there be any profit.

Still Expect Drop.

Still Expect Drop.

But the general public, it is urged, still believes that materials must come down. If they are wrong, a campaign of education to convince them of the contrary is necessary before the buying of materials can be begun. Anyway, with lumber trade tied up by a hesitating buyer and the shippard workers wondering where they are going to work after Oct. I, and the investors of capital in these shipbuilding enterprises still more anxious to get a decision from the government so that they can convert their capital to other uses or get foreign contracts, some dead of the general effect on this region of government policies can be derived.

Out here they fall to understand President Wilson's purpose in forbidding the yards in America from accepting foreign contracts to build ships. Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland were anxious to get ships built. Undoubtedly some of these neutral vessels utimately would carry German goods, but on the other hand even the request of the French government for permission to negotiate contracts for the building of ships in American yards was denied.

Mr. Wilson's policy would be under-the building of ships in American yards was denied.

Mr. Wilson's policy would be understood in the West if it intended to build more ships for itself or to arrange for the construction of an American merchant marine by co-operation between the government and private capital. But not a scintilla of information as to the future is available. Congress has not formulated a policy because it is not in session, and President Wilson has sent no word from Parls concerning acceptance of foreign contracts. When the armistice was signed there was pienty of opportunity to get foreign contracts. Now with the fall in the price of tonnage, it is doubtful whether the yards can compete with builders abroad. America may compete if the speed with which ships can be made ready for use as well as the ability of the shipbuilding companies to get greater efficiency by eliminating waste and double registration of men and loafing on the job are factors.

Anxious to Learn.

But the whole Northwest coast is anxious for some decision. Maybe there are too many yards; maybe some of them will have to go out of busiress because of foreign competition. Maybe the skilled mechanics will be absorbed by the automobile and truck industry and other occupations in other parts of the country which are begging for mechanics. But many of these workers have homes here and are natives of this region. In fact mest of the workers are Americans and there has been relatively little industrial trouble for that reason. Conservative leaders have been in charge of the labor movement and there is a good spirit of co-operation and understanding between capital and labor. The possibility that some wage cuts may have to be made is generally recognized, but the employers say they think they will not have to make very many reductions if they can only get efficiency out of the men. So the future of the American merchant marine, which means the future of American export trade as well as the capacity for the production of articles needed in other parts of the world, all depends upon this. Ocean tonnage and the price will retain a series are the determining factors in the development of an export trade and whether or not the Pacific coast shall furnish an annual contribution to the world's supply of the tonnage and therefore to the amount of money being charged for carying cargoes the world over depends upon a decision by the executive branch of the government and an agreement with congress at an early date on the needed appropriations for the new ships. If work is to be carried forward, especially in the construction of steel ships. Politically Oregon is very much the same as it was in 1916 except that the Republican strength has grown. President Wilson's foreign policies are the subject of some criticisms, but the people by a large majority, stand with him. He has popular support, particularly on the Italian question, and I heard many Republicans speak regretfully of Mr. Lodge's speech in opposition to the president's stand on the Italian claims. There is a disposition here to stand by the president in these iangled foreign problems because he is in Paris, where all the facts are available, and where evidently Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George tactity approve his course.

Peace Plan Written in 1914 for Allies to Accept Asked Big Indemnity.

PARIS, April 30 .- The terms Mathias Ersberger was in favor of imposing upon the ailies, if Germany had been who orious, as set forth in a memorandum writen by him in 1914, are outlined by a Geneva dispatch to the Journal, having been received at Geneva from the private secretary of the late Kurt Eisner, former Bavarian premier. "Germany in the first place can not olerate the presence on her frontiers of so-called neutral states insufficiently strong to preserve their neutrality or which do not want to remain neutral," world policy. In the third place, she must break up the Russian colossus.

"Consequently Germany must have sovereignty, not only over Belgium, but the French coast from Dunkirk to Boulogne and possession of the channel islands. Che must also take the mines in French Lorraine and create an African-German empire by anexing the Belgian and French Congos, British Nigeria, Dahomey and the French West coast.

"In fixing indemnities the actual capacity of a state at the moment should not be considered. Besides a large immediate payment, annual installments spread over a long period could be arranged. France would be helped in making them by decreasing her budget of naval and military appropriations, the reductions to be imposed in the peace treaty being such as would enable her to send substantial sums to Germany. Indemnities should provide for her to send substantial sums to Ger-many. Indemnities should provide for the repayment of the full costs of the war and the damages of war, notably in East Prussia, the redemption of all of Germany's public debt and the cre-ation of a vast fund for incapacitated soldiers."

The memorandum was received by Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, the then imperial chancellor, with reserve, and Gen. Falkenhayn, in acstrong to preserve their neutrality or serve, and Gen. Falkenhayn, in activative which do not want to remain neutral," said Erzberger.

"Her second aim must be to free white bear and the whale will give us many hard nuts to crack yet," a view which was shared by Gen. von Moltke strings of England on all questions of and Admiral von Tirpits.
